This has plenty of ironstone earthy character and chocolate as well. The colour and flavour show the beginnings of bottle-age. It's big and fleshy on the palate with richness, concentration and satisfying density.

Medium red colour with a faint tracery of purple. The bouquet is showing some development and is earthy, mineral and ironstone-like, with distinct chocolate overtones. It's big, fleshy and rich in the mouth, with good concentration and satisfying density.

Matured in both French and American oak. Soft style, raspberry, fennel and blackberry underpinned by fragrant herbs. Mid-weight with fleshy, grapey tannin. Even tempered, uncomplicated flow of flavour is the order of the day.
